verse one:

I pretend that we can fly,
Me and my dog, "The Mighty Ruff."
We don our capes, take to the sky
To save the world and other stuff.
When you see me running 'round
The yard in towel and underwear,
Perhaps I like to leave the ground
For high adventures in the air.

chorus:

So what if I, what if I, whatta whatta what if I,
What if I, what if I, what if I do?
So what if I, what if I, whatta whatta what if I,
What if I, whatta whatta what if I do?

verse two:

Sometimes I will make up songs.
They're not all hits, but I don't care.
I tell myself they're sing-a-longs
Appreciated everywhere.
My latest effort speaks of cheese
And chandeliers and gopher guts,
The speed of light and Socrates,
And I always mention monkey butts.

chorus two:

So what if I, what if I, whatta whatta what if I,
What if I, what if I, what if I do?
So what if I, what if I, whatta whatta what if I,
What if I, whatta whatta what if I...

bridge:

Do things that make me seem very odd?
I'm glad I'm not an ordinary kid.

verse three:

I'm working on a smart-phone app.
The icon is a gravy boat.
Use Bluetooth and a little tap
To find your missing mountain goat.

Or tap it twice to activate
The smell-detecting WonderSniff.
Should someone dare to flatulate,
I'll track 'em down with just one whiff.

(repeat chorus)

outro:

Socrates eats his cheese at the speed of light
Before the monkey butts and gopher guts
Can spoil his appetite.
Then the mountain goats appear.
They like to come and balance on his chandelier.

Ruff and me cautiously wander through the rooms
Armed with our WonderSniff to warn us if We're near Socratic fumes.
And the mountain goats stay clear.
They know we've got an app that helped us track 'em here.

Socrates eats his cheese at the speed of light
Before the monkey butts and gopher guts
Can spoil his appetite.
Then the mountain goats appear.
They like to come and balance on his chandelier.
